Once more the Harbour Master in his annual report is able to testify to the continued expansion of the shipping trade of Pre don Case Hongkong, the total arrivals and sailings tast year amounting to 14,349,122 tone, or an increase on 1892 of 198,273 tons. The increase is not very remarkable, but is satisfactory as far as it goes, and as the shipping is an index to the trade of the port we may take wells in that prefecture; and instructions have it that there was a corresponding increase in the amount of imports and exports. In his report for 1892 Captain Rouser dealt at some length with the contention which an indication of trade, and said that of the St. Vincent de Paul. The enclosure was gaily British possessions, large and small, in fancy dances and comediates. Considering the various parts of the world, from the number of tickets sold, the affair should prove a Dominion of Canada down to Fiji, he found on rofe ence to statistics for the ten years 1881-90, that in each case increased formage. care entering and clearing carried with increased value of imports and exports St. Estephe, Red Capsule .. 3 5:26. 7.56. There is no reason why tonnage should not be an equally reliable index to trade Hongkong, and up to last year it was the only index we had except the returns of the Chatena Hant Brion Larrivet 18.60 19.20 | Chinesa Imperial Maritime Customs showing the trade of the Chinese ports with Hongkong. During 1893, however, Captain Rumser has endeavoured to get statustice of ulos of the grape, and are not artificially made I the actual quantity of cargo landed and shipped in the Colony, and it would Sample bottles and smaller quantities will be seem bis efforts bave been attended was proposed a few years ago

When make the giving of returns of cargo compulsory the mercantile community con- confidential subordinate with some Tis. 40,000 to demned the proposal that ship agents and masters have not objected to supply returns voluntarily. These, of course, do not give values or very minute details of classification, but they will be undoubtedly useful in comparing the gross trade of one year with that of another and so gauging the progress of the Colony. It is particularly interesting, too, to know what proportion the amount of cargo landed and shipped in the Colony bears to transit cargo. It will probably surprise many people who have been inclined to look upon Hongkong merely as a port of call to learn that while the import cargo was 2,839,875 tons and the export cargo 1.613.642 tone, the transit cargo was only 1,335,264 tons, which shows that the Colony is something more that a maritime Clapham Junction and that the goods carried by the numerous vessels entering and clearing do not as a rule pass through without breaking bulk but that they are handled and dealt in here. The information obtained is, however, only approximate. From the mail lines monthly returns are Sample bettles and smaller quantities will be rendered on printed forms supplied by the barbour department, and the river steamers

Of the information so collected Captain Rumsey does not give very much in his report beyond the total quantity of cargo in tons and a few of the principal imports. He states the amount of import and export toanage from and to " Places other than China, etc.," and "China and adjacent places," but has not applied his import and export returns to this part of his report so as to show the actual amount of cargo carried by this tonnage. This information would be particularly interesting in view of the reported shifting of trade due to the exchange difficulty. We should like to know, too, what is to be understood by " China and adjacent. Blend and Watson's Glenorchy are equal to places. D as the term cover Jupan, the Philippines, and Singapore, for instance? As 1893 was the first vent in which the returns were collected, and the system being necessarily defective (for it light refection in the guest hall after first givi is only the importing and exporting meechants who could give absolutely accurate various courtyards and fire off the thousands of returns), it would be unreasonable to expect (prackers and their muskers-in fact to make as the information to be very complete, but in future reports it might with advantage be given in greater detail, showing as far as possible the different classes of goods and their quantities imported from and exported each other making congramatory bows to one to each country.
